Nothing Stops Another Day

Reference number PT0643

I see the sunrise from my window.
It must have risen ev'ry day.
But I couldn't see at all;
the shadows were too tall,
but I am seeing it today.

I could see the people speaking.
I couldn't hear a word they say.
Just the echo of it all,
passing through an empty hall.
I'm hearing it today.

Because the world keeps turning,
and I guess it always will.
I can choose to turn around,
or I can choose to just stand still.
Either way, nothing stops another day.

I lost my life and all its meaning.
And so I locked myself away.
Hiding my heart behind a wall,
I couldn't feel it beat at all.
But I'm feeling it today.

Because the world keeps turning,
and I guess it always will.
I can choose to turn around,
or I can choose to just stand still.
Either way, nothing stops another day.

I know I have to let go of the life I'll never know.

Hard as it may be.

And try to understand instead there's another life ahead.

Because the tallest mountain cannot stop the smallest stream.

Winter can't hold back the spring,

no matter how dark it may seem.

Come what may, nothing stops another day.

Come what may nothing stops another day.
