Lying There

Reference number PT0777

I look at you lying there sleeping so soundly.
Sometimes I wish I could sleep as calm as you.
And I bet in your dreaming I'm there I look peaceful.
And maybe you'd assume I'm lost in dreaming too.

But despite how I try to close my eyes and join you,
Despite how I try to hold my breath and body still.
Despite how I try not to jolt you or wake you.
I can't sleep, I don't breathe, I won't move
Am I fulfilled?

I look at you lying there and I want to hold you.
I want to sleep for decades by your side.
But with you I'm restless, I'm running on empty.
I'm living a life where I have compromised.

You'd think in my sleep I'd see you in my future.
You'd think in my dreams I'd see our kids play on the lawn.
You'd think in my nightmares I'd be living life without you
You would think, you would guess but I can't sleep,
so you'd be wrong.

You have blue eyes and I love blue eyes.
I love how you're six feet tall.
I love how we question if God's really there,
and how we hate Christmas time at the mall.
And on paper we're great, and our stars are aligned.
And it looks like it was all meant to be.
But night after night I keep shutting my eyes and I try, but I find I can't sleep.

I look at you lying sleeping without me.
I bet you'd never guess my restlessness just grows.
And while I want to shut my eyes and know the things you know,
I can't sleep, I can't breath, I can't move

How I wish I could wake you.
I wish I could jolt you.
I wish I could love you.
But wishing that I'd loved you isn't really loving.
I suppose.
